state organizer will address the meeting.

The opening of the fair gates on Sunday moves the Rev. Carl H. Elliott of the First Presbyterian church to change the subject of his evening sermon to "Keeping Holy Day."

Although there has not been much talk about the five-cent loaf of bread getting smaller in Salem, there is a more serious thing than the advance in bread looming low on the horizon, although on account of its "low visibility" it cannot be clearly seen at present. And that is, the Thanksgiving turkey is likely to be roosting high and along with it the high price of eating the national bird, as a Portland commission house is already offering from 22 to 24 cents on foot, and 24 cents dressed.

The First Baptist church of this city will rejoice Sunday in a renovated and improved building. Under the direction of the Woman's Industrial society the building has been cleaned throughout and several floors painted. The floor in the main auditorium has been finished in oil and varnish and a new Brussels carpet is being laid in the aisles and around the margins of the pews. The main auditorium was closed last Sunday but will be in use next Sunday. A newly organized choir under the leadership of Miss Minnetta Magers will have charge of the musical part of the services. The church and Sunday school and young people's society are planning for rally day on October 8.

MARION BUTTER

Awarded FIRST PRIZE In Butter Contest at the Oregon State Fair

The claims made by the Marion Creamery as to the excellence of Marion Butter is substantiated by the decision of the Fair Judges. It is hardly necessary to say that we feel highly pleased and grateful because of this official recognition.

The public is entitled to the best butter that human skill and modern improved machinery can produce. It will always be our aim to serve our patrons accordingly and in return we sincerely hope to earn their confidence and good will.
